They also gave her some cash, with additional contributions from some CHC nurses and other staff.

Ta and Ji then accompanied

Sun to the airport on Monday for her flight.

A Chinese writer who became homeless on Saipan for two years after being stricken with mental illness has now recovered and is back with her family in Fujian Province, China.

Despite her illness, Lina Sun, 43, managed to survive on the island with the help of many members of the Chinese community and other people.

Sun was treated at the psychiatric ward of the Commonwealth Health Center. With her mental condition finally improving, she called former Chinese Association of Saipan president Ta Bun Kuy two weeks ago, saying she wanted to go home.

Ta and Chinese Association of Saipan staff Owen Ji provided assistance, contacted Sun's family in China, and then sent her off at the Francisco C. Ada-Saipan International Airport on Monday at 2am.

Later that night on Monday, Ta and Ji received photos via email showing Sun finally meeting her family at an airport in China.

"She looked very happy and that makes us very happy too," Ji told Saipan Tribune.

Based on what he had gathered, Ta said that Sun, a writer, arrived on Saipan alone as a tourist. "She really writes well in Chinese," he said.

Ta said that Sun entered into a fixed marriage but during the interview with U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Service, the man did not show up as he had already left the CNMI.

Ta and Ji said that Sun often called them since last year, seeking help about finding a job on the island.

Anna Chan, the Chinese Association of Saipan vice president, took Sun under her wing and let her stay in an apartment last year. For a few months, a certain Mr. Deng also took care of her.

Another Chinese woman tried to help by calling the Chinese Consulate in Los Angeles, the Department of Public Safety, American Red Cross, Homeland Security, and Immigration.

Upon learning that her mental state was deteriorating, Ta and Ji offered help for Sun to see a doctor but she refused. Sun was seen "bothering" customers at a hotel for a week. She was sub-

CHCC has a new acting CFO

By FRAULEINE VILLANUEVA-DIZON
frauleine_villanueva@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

A new acting chief financial officer has been appointed for the Commonwealth Healthcare Corp.

The appointment of Eran Sheriff, Ph.D., was announced in a memorandum issued by CHCC chief executive officer Esther Muna on Nov. 23.

"He's actually hired as a finance officer but he's acting CFO now," Muna said in an interview.

According to Muna, Sheriff started Monday.

The memo said that Sheriff has "an extensive education and experience in finance that would be a tremendous and much needed asset to our organization" and that he will be acting CFO "until further notice."

With regards to being a full CFO, Muna said, "We'll see."

"I'm hoping that he will stay for a long time. I think he's going to stay here for a long time," Muna said.

The last CFO for CHCC was Jack Taitague who came onboard the hospital on June 2 last year. However, he resigned barely three months into the job.

The hospital hasn't had a permanent CFO since Alvaro Santos resigned in 2012.

Cora Ada, who held the acting position for over a year now, will be returning and focusing on her main responsibility as project coordinator for the Hospital and Public Preparedness Program.

The memo thanked Ada for taking the helm as the acting and interim CFO and noting that she went out of her way, above and beyond her role and responsibilities.

Frances Pangelinan, who also helped with the position, will be returning to the management of Accounts Payable and Federal Grant reporting.

exudes secondhand smoke into prohibited areas beyond the casino's gaming floor.

Best Sunshine lawyer Viola Alepuyo assured yesterday her client is concerned with the health of its patrons and have ongoing and planned "mitigating actions" to address the secondhand smoke emanating from the casino floor. These actions include "air curtain walls" at entrances to the Hard Rock Café and T Galleria, a new exhaust system, and air quality control tests.

She also maintained—citing public law definitions of "enclosed areas" and the law that exempts gaming floors from the smoking ban—that her client is in full compliance with the law.

"The law in my mind is clear," she told reporters yesterday.

She reiterated her Monday letter to the Commonwealth Casino Commission that the law requires departure terminals to be "self-contained" and ventilated in order to be exempt from smoking bans.

"That's not the same requirement for the casino," she added.

She also said the legislative intent is clear. Citing committee reports, she said lawmakers intended an exemption for "fully enclosed well ventilated areas of departure terminals at the airport—and casinos."

"They didn't say 'fully enclosed areas of the casino.' They just said 'and the casino,' she said, referring to Public Law 16-46.

According to Alepuyo, if an adverse agency action or notice of violation from the Division of Public Health is issued, they could appeal that through the Administrative Procedures Act through hearings, and if there were still disagreement, take it to court.

"How far will my client go? I don't know. That's a decision they will have to make—but each step of the way, the client will be kept advised of everything that is happening so they can make a decision," she said.

Ineffective

On Tuesday, Commonwealth Healthcare Corp. officials delivered a letter to Alepuyo, citing smoking prohibitions in the law and the dangers of secondhand smoke. The hospital is tasked with the enforcement of Public Law 16-46 or the Smoke-free Air Act of 2008 since it replaced the Department of Public Health.

"We have received reports that patrons of your establishment are smoking indoors in violation of the Act," the letter, signed by CHCC chief executive officer Esther Muña, said.

Muña said the premises of the casino would be inspected within the next 10 days. Intermittent inspections will also be conducted thereafter.

The letter pointed out that the Act "prohibits a person who owns, operates, or manages a place of employment from allowing patrons to smoke in an establishment which is subject to the smoking prohibition."

"CHCC finds that the open gaming area of Best Sunshine Live, within the DFS complex in Garapan, Saipan, is a public place for purposes of the Act," it added.

Becky Robles, NCD Bureau administrator of the Division of Public Health under CHCC, said Tuesday that "any type of ventilation system is ineffective for smoking."

When asked if the casino needs to be further enclosed and if Public Health is considering a citation, she said, "Yes" to both.

"We want to work with them to become compliant, so we are going to do follow up meetings next week and explain the law further and explain and educate," she said. "It needs to be enclosed, or smoking is not allowed on the gaming floor."

"Our overall concern is that the community patrons of DFS, Hard Rock, and Best Sunshine, as well as its employees, all have the right to breath clean air," she added.

Mitigating actions

On the planned air quality tests, Alepuyo said her client has found a company called APEC out of Guam who did soil testing on their Garapan hotel site for the air quality testing.

She said APEC has the equipment but needs the right cartridges. The company has been given the go ahead to order the cartridges, she said, which may arrive next week.

"We will work with Public Health to have their input on when and how much to test," she added.

The busiest hours at the casino are from 10pm to 10:30pm, according to Tao Xing, Best Sunshine's chief services officer.

On the new exhaust system, Alepuyo said the shipment arrived yesterday morning. She said the existing exhaust could suck out more air if replaced by a bigger model. The system would bring air out through the kitchen exhaust.

Alepuyo said, they also ordered three air curtains.

Yesterday, one air curtain was already installed at the casino entrance into the T Galleria, and the other two would be installed last night near the Hard Rock Café area.

Even before the equipment's arrival, the casino has been fabricating frames for the air curtains, she said.

A casino director of logistics and property management, who was present during the interview, said the airflow could be adjusted to be made stronger.

Working together

In an interview, Muña said they are giving an opportunity for Best Sunshine to be in compliance.

"We're giving them an opportunity to understand that they are not in compliance and that we would do an inspection if they will not fix and that's where the citation starts," she said.

She added that they are also following due process that's why it took them a while to respond.

"I understand the frustration of the public but we want to make sure that we give them the due process. Obviously somebody had allowed them to build it like that, and to plan it that way and design it that way. Now we're here to say that, no you're not [allowed], and basically, you have an opportunity to fix it," Muña said.

Under the law, violators are penalized not exceeding $200 for a first violation, $300 for a second, and $500 for succeeding violations, which could lead to the suspension or revocation of a corporation's business license.

It also enumerated information on secondhand smoke including its dangers, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"We're going to go back there simply because of the fact that [Public Law] 16-46 says that they're going to be penalized if they're not in compliance. We need to let them know that this is what's happening," Muna said. (With Frauleine Villanueva-Dizon)

PSS

PSS "until further notice."

In a letter addressed to Education Commissioner Dr. Rita A. Sablan, NMHC said the move was "due to the entity's non-compliance with CDBG requirements with its previous projects."

CDBG funds are allocated to the housing corporation by the U.S. Department of Urban and Housing Development.

Among the PSS projects that the housing corporation has issues with was "the loss of MHS Building J collateral equipment funded back in 2008 and the failure to construct the Saipan Southern High School swimming pool funded in 2013."

According to NMHC deputy director Zenie Mafnas, the Marianas High School project cost about $173,000 in CDBG funds. During an inventory check in 2010 that was part of their monitoring, NMHC was unable to find equipment such as laptops, desktops, projectors, and chairs. These missing items amount to $69,000.

The amount for the Saipan Southern swimming pool, on the other hand, is about $16,000.

Mafnas said PSS would have to reimburse NMHC for what it reimbursed HUD.

"These two items resulted in a reimbursement of CDBG funds to HUD. PSS has placed the CNMI at risk of losing CDBG grant funding due to its inability to adhere to grant requirements," the letter, signed by corporate director Jesse Palacios, said.

The letter further states that PSS has been non-cooperative despite NMHC's efforts to give it enough time to submit all the necessary project documentation.

It also stated that the conditions in the agreements between NMHC and PSS have been disregarded.

"NMHC cannot afford to lose CDBG funding because of a subrecipient's failure to meet grant requirements. As we all know, there is a need for community planning and development projects in the CNMI, which will benefit the entire community, most especially the children and youth, and NMHC must enforce its monitoring efforts and adhere to HUD's CDBG's program rules and regulations in order to continue the implementation of the CDBG program in the CNMI," the letter said.

The housing agency noted that they will continue to monitor current CDBG-funded projects of PSS.

In a Nov. 3, 2105, letter to CUC board chair Adelina Roberto, a copy of which was obtained by Saipan Tribune, OPA said it is communicating the preliminary results of the survey to the board "due to violations and weaknesses found in travel" and is giving the board time to make corrective action.

OPA told CUC to provide a plan of action by Nov. 16. However, CUC has yet to submit any such plan.

In a phone interview yesterday, CUC chief legal counsel James Sirok said they haven't submitted a plan of action but they are in communication with OPA.

"We have communicated with them already on this," Sirok said.

OPA raised five points in its initial survey results, the first of which is that the board adopted travel rules that are inconsistent with the law.

It stated that during an official meeting held on April 6 to 7 this year, "the board adopted a policy that prescribed how per diem is calculated for board members who travel to Saipan for board meetings."

OPA noted that the change arose after a discussion that the $15 subsistence allowance was not enough "for travel less than 10 hours."

"The subsistence allowance of $15 is a travel policy of the Executive Branch as well as CUC's travel policy. Therefore, the travel rules of the board shall be governed by the travel policies of the Executive Branch to comply with the law," OPA said.

OPA said that in CUC's enabling statute, the travel rules and per diem rates for board members shall be the same as those established by the Executive Branch.

"This provision of the Commonwealth Code cannot be changed by a majority vote by members of the board but would need to be repealed or amended by the Legislature," the OPA letter said.

OPA also pointed out that CUC's per diem calculation is not economical and cost-efficient as the corporation calculates estimated per diem by multiplying the per diem rate with the number of travel days and that CUC uses the per diem rates issued by the U.S. General Services Administration for their employee travel.

In their survey, OPA also found that employees and the board are given an advance of 100 percent of their estimated per diem, which is contrary to CUC's travel policy, which states that travel advances are limited to 80 percent of estimated per diem.

Outstanding travel advances

OPA also noted that travel vouchers are not being submitted in a timely manner.

In its review, OPA said that "a board member was issued repeated travel advances despite failure to clear outstanding advances."

"CUC's travel policy states that, 'Board members who fail to clear outstanding travel advances within the required period shall have any amounts due to them (e.g. honorariums and reimbursements) applied first against the outstanding advances until they are paid in full. Furthermore, they will not be entitled to travel advances on subsequent trips," OPA said.

OPA said it is communicating with CUC to resolve the deficiencies to prevent further non-compliance "and to begin the process of collecting any overpayments made to employees or board members."

"If timely action is taken by management and the board, then OPA does not see the need for conducting a formal audit on CUC's travel activities at this time," OPA said.

The letter, signed by Audit Manager David Blake and Public Auditor Michael Pai, recommended that CUC comply with the law and adopt travel regulations that are consistent with the established policy and law; are economical and cost-efficient; and incorporates a level of control to prevent fraud, waste and abuse.

Award-winning Aeronautical Dolphins impress Torres

By DENNIS B. CHAN

REPORTER

The Marianas High School Aeronautical Dolphins, champions of the national 2015 Real World Design Challenge, presented on Capital Hill Tuesday their award-winning design of an unmanned aircraft that they said would efficiently spray pesticide on crops while reducing the risks of chemical-related illnesses, wildlife loss, and harm to water quality. Acting governor Ralph DLG Torres said he came away from the presentation impressed.

"I was speechless with their success," Torres said. "Especially, with our situation here with [Typhoon] Soudelor and the commitment" they showed to the project. "I am actually really excited for their future. They built their friendship, camaraderie with each other, which brings not just Marianas High School to a whole new level but also the whole CNMI. I can't wait to see what's up with them next," he told Saipan Tribune.

The MHS team worked year-round to complete the winning design that they said could help address food shortage scenarios come 2050, when the world's population is expected to be at about 9 billion people.

Nine billion means 2 billion-plus more mouths to feed, or a minimum increase of about 70 percent of the population, team members said.

Project manager Ann Margaret Norcio told Inos administration officials that the team spent late nights at local cafes as they had to find ways to work on the project without power or Internet following Typhoon Soudelor.

"I really don't know how to describe it," said project mathematician Masrur Alam. "We've been working since November 2014 and they announced the results November 2015. We've put one year into this work, this product. And we worked everyday and most of the times during the weekends. To see what we designed win the national championship just left us—I don't know how to describe it," he told Saipan Tribune.

"For a lot of students who join clubs or competitions," Norcio told Saipan Tribune, "they usually do it to go on trips, to go to Washington, D.C. That's the same with RWDC. We've had many people come try out, many people come and leave after finding out for this year students won't be going to compete in Washington, D.C."

"That would be a letdown for most of the other competitors but for us, we didn't mind that we weren't going to D.C. What we focused on more was the challenge. Knowing that we worked this hard, and knowing that we didn't have to go to D.C. for it... it feels very good," she added.

Exhilarating

MHS mathematics teacher and coach John Raulerson also shared how the winning team found out the news, growing teary eyed and emotional as he spoke.

He said they competed via teleconference on a Sunday, a day before winners were announced.

It was during second period on a school day when he and his students gathered to listen to the announcement.

As merit awards were being announced, the MHS team was passed over, despite one of the awards being an "against all odds" award, given the island's situation after Typhoon Soudelor.

Raulerson said when they were announced as the overall winner, the "whole room went crazy" and students went knocking on other teachers' rooms to share the news.

He said only the state of Kansas has won the competition twice. The MHS teams join that list after winning the national competition in 2013.

"Here we are in the middle of the ocean and we won it twice. I think these kids deserve to see the president of the United States," Raulerson said, to much applause.

Judge tells ex-lawmaker to hire a private lawyer

Superior Court Associate Judge Kenneth L. Govendo has relieved the Office of the Public Defender as counsel for former lawmaker Juan Iguel Tenorio in connection with the charges that he beat up a male teenager in Marpi.

Tenorio

At a status conference on Tuesday, Govendo ordered the 66-year-old Tenorio to hire a private counsel after the Office of Adult Probation determined that he is able to retain counsel.

A bench trial is scheduled for April 25, 2016.

Govendo said if Tenorio fails to appear at his scheduled hearing, a bench warrant will be issued for his arrest.

Assistant attorney general Heather Barcinas appeared for the government. Assistant public defender Michael Sato appeared as then-counsel for Tenorio.

The information charged Tenorio with assault and battery and disturbing the peace.

Assistant attorney general Shannon R. Foley stated in the information that Tenorio punched the victim in the face on April 2, 2015.

Foley said Tenorio also screamed profanities at the victim and punched him in the face.

The defendant pleaded not guilty of the charges.

Police detective Jesus K. Wabot stated in his report that a responding police officer learned that Tenorio tailed the 19-year-old male and his two female passengers from the former La Fiesta Mall area in San Roque to the parking lot of Marianas Trekking, where the assault happened.

The officer said the victim had a one-inch laceration on his nose. One female passenger of the car was crying.

The teenager told police that he was driving his car with two passengers heading to the Grotto when a white car, which was heading in the same direction, passed them and cut in front of his vehicle at a close distance.

The female passenger got upset and flipped off Tenorio, who was the driver of the white car. The former lawmaker then followed them to the Marianas Trekking parking lot, where the alleged beating happened. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Republican candidates are exploiting a crisis

"The face of terror is not the true faith of Islam. That's not what Islam is about. Islam is peace."
—President George W. Bush, Sept. 17, 2001

With recovery personnel still digging through the smoldering rubble of the World Trade Center and the horrifying shock of the 9/11 attacks still reverberating, George W. Bush took a moment to remind Americans of the enemy: not Muslims, but homicidal fanatics claiming to act in the name of Islam.

Bush knew there was no incompatibility between Republican ideals and the faith practiced by upward of 2 million Americans. In 2000, according to a poll conducted by the Council on American-Islamic Relations, Bush got 72 percent of the Muslim vote.

How things have changed. This year, the two candidates leading in polls of GOP voters are Donald Trump and Ben Carson, both of whom seem intent on making sure no Muslim would ever consider voting Republican.

Last week, Trump called for "surveillance of certain mosques," and later seemed to indicate he favored a federal database to monitor Muslims. As for Syrian refugees he has said, "If I win, they're going back." But he outdid himself in recalling the reaction in New Jersey, after the 9/11 attacks, when "thousands and thousands of people were cheering as that building was coming down."

There was no evidence to support that claim, and the police commissioner of Paterson, N.J., which has almost 30,000 Muslims, rebutted Trump: "That is patently false. That never happened."

This was a perfect opportunity for Trump's rivals to reject fear-mongering. But Carson, who had earlier said he couldn't accept a Muslim as president, insisted that he too had seen the footage Trump mentioned. Nor was Chris Christie, who happens to be governor of New Jersey, willing to challenge Trump. "I think if it had happened, I would remember it," he said limply, "but, you know, there could be things I forget too."

Trump and Carson are not alone in their pandering. Christie said he wouldn't accept Syrian refugees even if they are "orphans under 5." Ted Cruz favors admitting only Syrian refugees who are Christians, and Jeb Bush sounded sympathetic to the idea.

Fortunately, some of those in the race have taken a more sober view. John Kasich firmly dismissed registering Muslims or refusing non-Christian refugees. Rand Paul said he opposed a registry and any special surveillance of mosques. Marco Rubio noted that most mosques "have nothing to do with radical Islam."

The Paris attacks and the alarming rise of the Islamic State have sparked understandable fear among Americans.

It doesn't help that some Democrats affect glib disdain for the legitimate alarm. Martin O'Malley raised the prospect of "fascism" taking over. President Barack Obama engaged in partisan taunting. "Now they're worried about 3-year-old orphans," he sniped. "That doesn't sound very tough to me."

Democrats, starting with the president, need to address the widespread anxiety. But, even worse, some Republican candidates are irresponsibly exploiting it. Crises such as these are the moments when real leadership has a chance to emerge. So far, there's been too little of it.

A 9/11 model for France

The wisdom of the U.S. decision to keep troops in Afghanistan on a semi-permanent basis will be long debated. What is beyond debate is the brilliance of the post-9/11 invasion, which holds lessons for the French people following the massacres of Nov. 13 in Paris and the similarly appalling loss of life in the former French colony of Mali on Nov. 20.

After 9/11, instead of opting for the kind of knee-jerk bombings that had too often been ordered by the Clinton administration after al-Qaida attacks against U.S. embassies and the destroyer Cole, the Bush administration (or, more truthfully, the Department of Defense led by Donald Rumsfeld) moved carefully, devising one of the more innovative military campaigns in modern American history.

There was almost an eeriness about the U.S. global response in the days after 9/11. We saw none of the usual attempts at immediate vengeful gratification—the path France has chosen to satisfy the demands of its rightfully outraged people. Instead, the Defense Department embodied an attitude that essentially said, "We will choose the time and place of our reprisal; and it will be fearsome." Initially, al-Qaida leaders took this as a sign that America had been struck so badly that it could not muster a coherent response. Far from it.

Ordered to go after al-Qaida's bases and target its leaders in Afghanistan, the leader of U.S. Central Command, Gen. Tommy Franks, came back to Rumsfeld saying that he could be ready to invade in six months. Understandably exasperated, Rumsfeld replied, "I want men on the ground now!"

But this did not mean a conventional force, much less massive airstrikes.

Instead, a plan was devised to insert U.S. special forces and intelligence units into Afghanistan within days of the 9/11 attacks. These units established contact with anti-Taliban and anti-al-Qaida groups and tribes among the Afghan people, most notably the collection known as the Northern Alliance. The images of these brave Americans at work are now familiar: bearded and riding horseback beside their Afghan allies, they moved about the country, precisely identifying targets to be struck by American air power.

This process went on for several weeks, until the United States formally launched Operation Enduring Freedom on Oct. 7. Only then did we see the extent to which patient and dangerous ground-work had paid off. Perhaps the most notable images were of our delighted Afghan partners watching in awe as the U.S. Air Force—notoriously the most imprecise of American military arms—actually hit the targets it was supposed to, which had been laser "painted" by our men on the ground.

The action won for the U.S. an enormous store of faith among Afghans; and although that store was soon to be squandered by

By CALEB CARR

Caleb Carr, author of The Lessons of Terror: A History of Warfare Against Civilians, is a military historian who frequently writes and lectures on matters of military and security policy, particularly terrorism. He wrote this for the Los Angeles Times.

George W. Bush's foolhardy attempt (later repeated with even more disastrous results in Iraq) to occupy and "democratize" Afghanistan, that squandering must not obscure the brilliance of the attack itself.

That attack is what the French armed forces must adopt as a model. As we have seen, France has many citizens that can pass in and out of Syria; this can be used to France's advantage. France ought to quietly embed special forces troops of Muslim background into those sectors of Islamic State-contested Syria that still contain large numbers of displaced but not yet refugee citizens. These troops could join or replace small groups of U.S. special forces, who are less ideally suited by background to the work at hand. Their courage bolstered, Syrian dissenters will prove willing guides, pointing out where French missile strikes should fall and where an eventual French conventional action might take place, should that ever prove wise.

This is France's fight, first and foremost. The Islamic State has made it so. In addition, France has a long history in both Mali and Syria as a colonial power, usually an unhappy one, as Islamic State-inspired operatives remember only too well. For example, in the aftermath of the World War I, when French Gen. Henri Gouraud took formal control of Damascus from the British, he went to the tomb of Saladin (the great Muslim victor over the Christians in the Third Crusade) and stupidly announced, "Saladin, we have returned. My presence here consecrates victory of the Cross over the Crescent."

Unlike most Western young people, young Muslims have a very informed and vivid historical awareness: The bewilderment of so many commentators as to why France should have been selected for the Nov. 13 attacks is in itself bewildering. But France, if it now remembers the U.S. invasion of Afghanistan (and omits the subsequent mistake of trying to maintain a long-term military presence in that country) can undo much of the damage done by its past actions.

This will mean immediately suspending bombing missions in favor of patience, deliberateness and cunning. These are the weapons that France's enemies are displaying, and they must be answered in kind.

How to defeat the Islamic State

The “Islamic” identity of the Islamic State has understand-ably attracted a lot of notice. There is no question that it is a fanatical group with a twisted religious ideology at the core of its identity. And it is the appeal of that ideology, along with the sheer thrill of adventure, that leads foreigners—in the summer, one estimate was 1,000 a month—to go to Iraq and Syria to join its ranks. It is also responsible, of course, for motivating terrorists to carry out the mass shootings and bombings in Paris, the bombing of a Russian Metrojet airliner and suicide bombings in Beirut.

But the Islamic State has another identity as well, one that is more important for those who actually live under its “caliphate.” It is a Sunni Arab supremacist group that champions perceived Sunni Arab interests against those of Kurds (who are also Sunnis), Shiite Muslims, Alawites, Turkmens and other ethnic and religious groups in Iraq and Syria. Those interests are as much political and ethnic as they are religious.

All of this helps explain why so many former Baathists—pre-dominantly Sunni Arabs—are so prominent in its ranks, especially members of Saddam Hussein’s intelligence services. They see the Islamic State as the best way to reassert their traditional dominance in Iraq, which they lost with Hussein’s downfall. In Syria, Sunnis were sidelined even earlier, with the rise in 1971 of Hafez Assad, father of current dictator Bashar Assad, who, under the cloak of Syria’s own Baathist party, instituted de facto rule by his extended family, all Alawites (an offshoot of Shiite Islam).

The Sunni ethnic identity is both a source of strength for the Islamic State and a potentially fatal weakness, if it can be properly exploited.

The record of the last couple of years is pretty clear: The Islamic State can take and hold only Sunni Arab areas. It has not been able to advance into the Shiite heartland of Iraq or the Alawite heartland of Syria. And when it overstretches and tries to hold Kurdish, Shiite or Yazidi areas, it can be pushed back.

That has happened in northern Syria, where the Kurds have wrested away the town of Kobani from Islamic State control, as well as in northern Iraq, where a force of Yazidis and Kurds backed by U.S. air power recently retook the town of Sinjar.

But the Islamic State’s hold on Raqqa, in Syria, and Mosul, Ramadi and other cities in Iraq has not been shaken. They are primarily populated by Sunni Arabs (admittedly with a large Kurdish minority in Mosul) who see the Islamic State’s rule as a better alternative than domination by vengeful Alawite or Shiite militias backed by Iran.

Those forces and their Iranian backers, which constitute the most powerful armed forces in both Iraq and Syria, appear to understand this. Despite endless American prodding, the Iraqi security forces and Shiite militias have been in no hurry to recapture Ramadi or Mosul because they know they can’t hold those cities. The Kurds understand it as well, which is why they are not marching into Ramadi or Raqqa either, and if they march into Mosul, it would trigger a terrible backlash among the Sunni majority there.

These realities mean that the fall of Sinjar at the hands of the Kurds, however welcome, does not signal the coming defeat of the Islamic State in Iraq and beyond. The only way that will be accom-plished is by mobilizing Sunni Arabs to rise up against it as they rose up against its predecessor, al-Qaida, in Iraq in 2007.

And that won’t happen unless the U.S. and its allies offer Sun-nis some assurance that they will not be trading the tyranny of the Islamic State for the tyranny of Shiite rule.

In Iraq, Sunnis need to be offered a Sunni regional government, akin to the Kurdish regional government, with its autonomy pro-protected by its own militia and ultimately guaranteed by the United States. If Baghdad won’t go along, the U.S. should bypass Baghdad and directly arm and train the Sunni tribes. In Syria, Sunnis need to be offered a future in which they won’t be terrorized by Assad and Shiite militias.

In other words, the U.S. needs to make clear its intent to top-ple Assad along with the Islamic State. Declaring no-fly zones to ground Assad’s air force and safe zones to limit his forces from ad-

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Whatever the outcome, funding is assured

Our Pacific Air Forces team had the great privilege of meeting with the people of the CNMI during two recent public meetings. We want to thank everybody who participated and offered questions or comments. Every time our team has traveled to your islands and met with officials and the public we have gained better insight into your history, culture, and concerns.

The Air Force proposal to establish a divert and exercise location within CNMI, begun five years ago, is complex. The Department of Defense is obligated to meet a high standard to ensure the interests of all stakeholders are considered. Thus, we continue to be commit-ted to full transparency in our planning efforts and welcome every opportunity to answer questions and address public concerns.

Close consultation with CNMI officials and the general public, as well as CPA Resolution 14-02, has led to the reduced scope you see in our recently released Revised Draft Environmental Impact Statement (RDEIS). You spoke and we listened. For those con-cerned about noise impacts, we removed fighter aircraft and their associated munitions from the proposal. For those who believe Tin-ian should be the focus of Air Force development, we have created a “Hybrid” alternative that limits infrastructure improvements on Saipan to three projects, relocating the majority of investment and exercise activity to Tinian. This Hybrid alternative combines ben-efits of our other two alternatives; Saipan-only and Tinian only. In fact, under the Hybrid alternative Tinian would see practically the same infrastructure improvements that would be executed under a “Tinian-only” alternative. The net effect is a smaller footprint on Saipan and improvements to both islands, while still meeting our core requirements.

Several recent news articles have raised doubts about funding for Divert-related projects if the Air Force selects Tinian for develop-ment. We can assure you the Divert and Exercise initiative will re-main a priority at the highest levels of the Department of Defense, regardless of the outcome of the RDEIS process. When the Secre-tary of the Air Force, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, makes a decision—Saipan-only, Tinian-only, or the Hybrid—we expect the Department of Defense will request funding from Con-gress for all applicable projects.

Thank you again for the feedback and participation in the public meetings. It is very important to us to get this right. We look forward to reviewing all comments provided to ensure our alternatives miti-gate or eliminate any potential impacts to the CNMI. The Air Force has a responsibility to maintain resilient operations throughout the Pacific to support our allies and partners. We feel our alternatives meet that responsibility while respecting the islands you call home. We look forward to continued cooperation with all stakeholders and to our next trip to CNMI.

6 beaches red-flagged

The Division of Environmental Quality has red-flagged six Saipan beaches and is advising the public not to fish or swim within 300 feet of these locations for the next 48 hours or until otherwise notified.

The affected sites are Paupau Beach, San Roque School, Garapan Beach drainage, Plumeria Hotel, Puerto Rico, and Old Man By The Sea.

Samples collected from these locations contained excessive concentrations of fecal indicator bacteria (enterococci) that exceeded the CNMI Marine Water Quality Standards. These bacteria can indicate the presence of human and animal waste in the water.

DEQ analyzes water samples collected from Saipan's recreational beaches and storm drainage every Tuesday. For more information, contact DEQ at 664-8500. (DEQ)

26 couples take part in ME Weekend

The CNMI Chapter of the Worldwide Marriage Encounter graduated 26 new couples at its fall 2015 Weekend, which took place from Nov. 20 to 22 at the Kanoa Resort.

The presenting team consisted of Tom and Erica Thornburgh, Fr. Isaac Ayuyu, John and Carol Hosono, and Gonzalo and Linda Pangelinan. The Renewal night is scheduled for Monday, Nov. 30, 2015, from 6pm to 9pm at the Kanoa Resort's Seaside Hall. All newly encountered and alumni couples are encouraged to attend.

The mission of Worldwide Marriage Encounter, a marriage enrichment program, emphasizes the importance of communication between husband and wife, who spend a weekend together away from the distractions and the tensions of everyday life, to concentrate on each other. It's a special time for spouses to be alone together—to rediscover each other and together focus on their relationship for an entire weekend. Every marriage deserves that kind of attention.

The next ME Weekend will be scheduled on April 15-17, 2016. For more information, contact the CNMI's Ecclesial Couple, Charles and Cathy Cepeda, at 483-7000. (ME)

MCS Theatre Club presents 'White Christmas' musical

Coming off the huge success of its recent stage adaptation of The Breakfast Club, Mount Carmel School's Theatre Club is gearing up for its next show, a musical production of White Christmas, which will feature swinging jazz music from the award-winning Guam Territorial Band.

At the helm of White Christmas as director is Theatre Club veteran Jonathan Pangelinan, who has starred in numerous productions, notably as Olaf in last year's hit production of The Snow Queen. Despite his experience, though, Pangelinan has found that directing is a completely different experience. As he puts it, "It's been difficult, especially because this is my first time leading this many people. But it's also interesting because I get to see how a play gets made. When you're a cast member, you don't see that."

Despite the transition, Pangelinan is very excited about directing this show. "I always looked up to people who directed plays, and after learning more about this story, I knew I had to direct this show. I especially love the way the romance works out in the story for the two couples."

More importantly, Pangelinan felt it was important to raise the community's spirits in light of tragedies that have struck the island and the global community in the past few months, including Super Typhoon Soudelor and the recent terrorist attacks. "Lately, not a lot of good things have been happening, so I'm hoping that this show will be one of the good things that happens in our community so that people will experience the joy and happiness of Christmas."

This will not be the first time that the Theatre Club has staged White Christmas. The club performed the show back in 1998 as its first musical production, which at the time featured another award-winning band, the University of Guam Jazz Band. The club is revisiting White Christmas as part of its 20th anniversary celebration. This time, however, the story has been adapted for a local audience. As Pangelinan hinted, "It has very Saipan-esque changes. People will recognize a lot of the references, especially AlumKnights."

White Christmas will be performed on Friday, Dec. 4, and Saturday, Dec. 5, at Saipan World Resort. Doors open at 6:30pm and tickets are $25 for premium, front-row seats, $10 for preferred seats closer to the stage, and $5 for general admission seats. Tickets can be purchased at the school's Business Office or at the door. However, due to limited seating, advanced purchase of tickets is recommended. For more information, call 234-6184 or visit www.mountcar-melsaipan.com. (MCS)

Temporary water outage in Kagman

Water personnel of the Commonwealth Utilities Corp. were unable to provide water service to customers in the higher elevations of Kagman yesterday due to low levels in the Kagman reservoir.

CUC Water personnel discovered a drop in tank levels Wednesday morning and spent the day searching for the cause of the water loss. According to CUC Junior Engineer James Benavente, Operations and Engineering teams will resume a well-by-well inspection of the entire Kagman water system Thursday morning to identify the source of the problem.

In the meantime, CUC water customers in portions of Kagman I and Kagman III will continue to experience a temporary service interruption until the problem is resolved and water levels inside of the tank are restored.

For more information, visit our website www.cucgov.org or contact CUC's Customer Call Center at 664-4CUC (664-4282). (CUC)

Holiday Bazaar at Fiesta on Dec. 6

Brilliant Star School is once again hosting an Annual Holiday Bazaar on Dec. 6, 2015, Sunday, at Fiesta Resort and Spa Saipan in Garapan. Just like last year's very successful event, it will be held in the dinner show area from 9am to 2pm.

This 11th edition of the holiday bazaar will showcase the many talents, wares, and services of our CNMI artists and service providers during this one-day event. Local artists, cultural performers, as well as gift and community service providers are welcome to join the event by either displaying or offering their crafts at a booth or performing a short piece on stage. Additional attractions include a children's arts and crafts area and the annual holiday raffle.

Some of the benefits for participating are:

■ You get a "jump start" on sales before the traditional "start" of the holiday season.

■ Fiesta Resort is a convenient and familiar location frequented by island residents and tourists.

■ Free promotion done by Brilliant Star School. You don't have to spend money on advertising.

■ Brilliant Star will name participants as often as possible while marketing this event via newspaper, radio announcements, posters, and flyers.

■ Only a limited number of booths will be made available to guarantee that the expected several hundred guests will visit your booth.

■ Your participation will benefit the close to 100 children of Brilliant Star School, a private non-profit organization educating children from the ages of 18 months through the fifth grade.

■ Attendees generally spend money to assist the school and buy their gifts during this annual holiday event. Being part of this school fundraising event will result in more sales for you.

The vendor registration fee is $50 per individual display/sales area. The registration form and the layout of the dinner show area can be picked up at Brilliant Star School, located on Navy Hill. Or call 323-7827 for more information. (Brilliant Star)

Ogumoro's motion to have charges dismissed denied

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
ferdie_deltorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Superior Court Associate Judge David A. Wiseman has denied the motion of former Department of Public Safety deputy commissioner Ambrosio T. Ogumoro to have five of the eight corruption charges filed against him dismissed.

Finding Ogumoro's arguments unpersuasive, Wiseman denied the motion to dismiss three counts of misconduct in public office and two counts of removal of government property.

The three other charges in the second amended information are theft by deception, conspiracy to commit theft by deception, and theft by unlawful taking or disposition.

Ogumoro, through counsel Mark B. Hanson and Benjamin Petersburg, objects to the criminal charges contained in the two counts of removal of government property, alleging that prosecution of these misdemeanor charges did not commence within one year under the statute.

Wiseman noted that the government's prosecution of Ogumoro's case started on March 23, 2015, when an arrest was executed.

Assistant attorney general Matthew C. Baisley argued that even if prosecution for a crime is time barred, it may still commence for "any offense based on misconduct in office by a public officer or employee at any time when the defendant is in the same public office or employment or within two years thereafter."

Citing Ogumoro's termination letter, Baisley said that Ogumoro's last day as a public official was on March 23, 2014.

Accordingly, the day of Ogumoro's arrest—March 23, 2015—was one day before the tolled statute of limitations deadline under Rule 45 of the Commonwealth Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Wiseman said conviction of the criminal charges contained in the three counts of misconduct in public office depends on whether Ogumoro was a public official at the time of the alleged offense.

Ogumoro also argued that prosecution of the criminal charges in one count of conspiracy to commit theft by deception, and two counts of removal of government property must be dismissed because it violates the double jeopardy clause.

The double jeopardy clause protects an individual against multiple punishments from the same offense.

But Wiseman was not persuaded. He said that one count of removal of government property refers to a government-owned car that was allegedly taken on Dec. 5, 2012. The other refers to a government-owned computer that was allegedly taken on March 12, 2013.

Wiseman said he is not persuaded that prosecution of the charges contained in the two counts of removal of government property (or conspiracy to commit theft by deception charge) are indicative of multiple punishments for the same offense.

Ogumoro also objected to the criminal charges contained in three counts of misconduct in public office and one count of removal of government property, saying those charges fail to comply with Rule 7.

Under Rule 7, "The information shall be a plain, concise, and definite statement of the essential facts constituting the offense charged."

Wiseman is not persuaded that the counts are deficient under Rule 7.

Citing precedent, Wiseman said the court explained that, "the Commonwealth, by Rule, need not bare their entire theory of the case for the defense at the outset of trial."

Generally, Wiseman said, vagueness or indefiniteness of an information may entitle a defendant to a bill of particulars clarifying the charges.

As to the sufficiency of the information, Wiseman said he looks to the information as a whole and in the context of any discovery conducted.

The second amended information also charged Ogumoro's co-defendant Herman M. Manglona with conspiracy to commit theft by deception and receiving stolen property.

The jury trial of Ogumoro and Manglona will commence on Dec. 7, 2015. Last week, Ogumoro's co-defendant, Katherine Manglona, was dismissed from the case. Katherine Manglona is Ogumoro's girlfriend and sister of Herman Manglona.

According to the allegations, Ogumoro brought a 1995 Toyota four-door Tercel that belonged to DPS to a shop for repairs using DPS funds totaling $2,500 in 2012 and then sold the vehicle as "scrap" for only $50 to Herman Manglona.

Ogumoro and Katherine Manglona also allegedly instructed a DPS staff to bring a DPS desktop computer to a shop for repair using DPS funding in the amount of $276.

The computer was allegedly later used in the office at True North Bar & Grill, which is owned by Ogumoro.

Militant attacks abroad a diplomatic quandary for China’s Xi

BEIJING (AP)—The murders of Chinese citizens by Islamic militants in Syria and Mali place President Xi Jinping in a quandary: How can Beijing respond effectively without betraying its strict stance against intervention?

The dilemma underscores the tension between China’s desire to be seen as a leading global power and its desire to maintain its own independent foreign policy while shunning the U.S.-led Western liberal democratic political agenda.

How Xi will square that ideological circle and what concrete actions he’ll take in response could mark an inflection point in Chinese diplomacy. More likely, analysts say, he’ll stick to China’s long-established neutrality while possibly taking limited behind-the-scenes measures to help in the global campaign against Islamic extremists.

“For China, intervention would be a real game-changer,” said Australian National Security College expert Michael Clarke. “Frankly, I think Xi is in a very difficult position here.”

Regardless of what it chooses to do, China has increasingly found itself confronted by Islamic militant groups.

Three Chinese—all high-ranking executives with the state-owned China Railway Construction Corp.’s international group—were among the 19 victims of last week’s attack on the Radisson Blu hotel in Mali’s capital, Bamako. The al-Qaida-linked group known as Al-Mourabitoun—or The Sentinels—has claimed responsibility for the attack.

That followed the killing of 50-year-old Beijing native Fan Jinghui by Islamic State group extremists. Xi vowed to bring Fan’s killers to justice, but China has offered no details on how it plans to do so.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Hong Lei told reporters Monday that China was working to “increase our emergency reaction and early warning capabilities” to confront threats against overseas personnel and assets.

Calls online from the Chinese public dismissing Beijing’s response and calling for action against militants have been suppressed by China’s Internet censors. With more Chinese than ever traveling abroad for work, study and travel, the government has been under growing pressure to identify threats and ensure their safety through its consulates and embassies.

Japan defense minister supports US in South China Sea

CAMP H.M. SMITH, Hawaii (AP)—Japanese Defense Minister Gen Nakatani on Tuesday expressed his support for the U.S. Navy’s sailing of a warship close to one of China’s artificial islands in the South China Sea.

Nakatani told reporters after meeting Adm. Harry Harris, the commander of the U.S. Pacific Command, that the U.S. military was at the forefront of the international community’s efforts to protect open, free and peaceful oceans in the South China Sea. He added he expressed Japan’s support for U.S. actions to Harris.

“The international community will not allow the unilateral changing of the status quo by force, and our country believes the same,” Nakatani said. “The U.S. believes the same, too, and we agreed on this point.”

The U.S. Navy last month sailed a guided missile destroyer inside what China claims is a 12-mile territorial limit around Subi Reef in the Spratly Islands. The move was a challenge to what the U.S. considers Beijing’s “excessive claim” of sovereignty in those waters.

He said Japan would continue to help countries in the region bolster their own maritime forces. Japan is giving 10 patrol ships to the Philippine coast guard.

“We have proactively participated in activities promoting the regional stability, including helping build the capacity of countries around the South China Sea and holding joint exercises between the U.S. military and the Japanese Self-Defense Forces,” Nakatani said.

The defense minister’s visit to Hawaii to meet with senior U.S. military leaders was his first since Japan’s parliament in September approved legislation loosening post-World War II constraints on its military.

The new law allows Tokyo’s military to defend its allies even when the country isn’t under attack. The law will enable Japan to work more closely with the U.S. and other nations.

The new law would also allow Japan to help defend a U.S. ship under attack. The U.S. has long been able to help a Japanese ship in the same situation, but Japan’s prohibitions against collective self-defense didn’t allow the reverse.

The legislation sparked protests and debate in Japan about whether Tokyo should shift away from its pacifist ways to face growing security challenges.

The law’s supporters say Japan’s neighborhood has become a more dangerous place, citing North Korean missile tests and Chinese challenges to Japanese sovereignty over remote islands.

They say Japan’s military needs to be more active to deter China and North Korea and help preserve Japan’s peace and prosperity. A major goal of the legislation is to allow the military to work more closely with its main ally, the United States, strengthening their joint capabilities.

Turkey shoots down Russian jet it says violated its airspace

MOSCOW (AP)—Turkey shot down a Russian warplane on Tuesday that it said ignored repeated warnings and crossed into its airspace from Syria, killing at least one of the two pilots in a long-feared escalation in tensions between Russia and NATO. Russian President Vladimir Putin denounced what he called a “stab in the back” and warned of “significant consequences.”

The shoot down—the first time in half a century that a NATO member has downed a Russian plane—prompted an emergency meeting of the alliance. The incident highlighted the chaotic complexity of Syria’s civil war, where multiple groups with clashing alliances are fighting on the ground and the sky is crowded with aircraft bombing various targets.

“As we have repeatedly made clear we stand in solidarity with Turkey and support the territorial integrity of our NATO ally, Turkey,” NATO Secretary-General Jens Stoltenberg told a news conference after the meeting of the alliance’s decision-making North Atlantic Council, called at Turkey’s request.

The pilots of the downed Su-24 ejected, but one was killed by Syrian rebel fire from the ground as he parachuted to Earth, said the Russian general staff, insisting the Russian jet had been in Syrian airspace at the time. One of two helicopters sent to the crash site to search for survivors was also hit by rebel fire, killing one serviceman and forcing the chopper to make an emergency landing, the military said.

Stoltenberg urged “calm and de-escalation” and renewed contacts between Moscow and Ankara. Russia has long been at odds with NATO, which it accuses of encroaching on Russia’s borders, as well as with Turkey’s determination to oust Syrian President Bashar Assad, a longtime Moscow ally.

In Washington, President Barack Obama said Turkey “has a right to defend its territory and its airspace.”

At a news conference with French President Francois Hollande, he said the incident underscored the “ongoing problem” with Russia’s military operations in Syria, where the Russians have been targeting groups near the Turkish border. Calling Russia an “outlier” in the global fight against the Islamic State group, Obama said that if Moscow were to concentrate its airstrikes on IS targets, mistakes “would be less likely to occur.”

On Sept. 30, Russia began a campaign of massive airstrikes in Syria, which it says are aimed at destroying fighters of the Islamic State group but which Western critics contend are bolstering Assad’s forces.

Before Tuesday’s incident, Russia and the West appeared to be moving toward an understanding of their common strategic goal of eradicating IS, which gained momentum after the Nov. 13 attacks in Paris, as well as the Oct. 31 bombing of a Russian airliner over Egypt’s Sinai desert. The Islamic State group claimed responsibility for both attacks.

Turkey said its fighter pilots acted after two Russian Su-24 bombers ignored numerous warnings that they were nearing and then entering Turkish airspace. In a letter to the U.N. Security Council and Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon, Turkey said the Russian warplanes violated its airspace “to a depth of 1.36 miles and 1.15 miles ... for 17 seconds” just after 9:24 a.m.

Paris attackers exploited intelligence gaps that remain open

PARIS (AP)—The Paris attackers exploited intelligence holes from France to Syria, authorities say, taking advantage of mistrust between European governments, France’s overwhelmed security services and the collapse of authority across the war zone contested by the Islamic State group.

Eleven days after the attacks in Paris, French authorities have announced few details about the investigation, and Brussels remains locked down for reasons the government has hardly explained. Officials aren’t disclosing everything they have found out about the attackers and their travels between Europe and Syria. But officials and security experts say it seems clear that Europe’s borderless travel and suspicion between governments at sharing intelligence information left the continent vulnerable.

“At the national level it’s a question of resources. Dealing with just the sheer number of foreign fighters, of known and potential terrorists in a country like France, has without question started to overwhelm the French security services,” Christopher S. Chivvis, associate director of RAND’s International Security and Defense Policy Center, told The Associated Press.

On the European level, he said, baked-in mistrust between intelligence agencies, as well as privacy concerns, have complicated how the bloc is policed: “Unless the will is there to actually share intelligence between one agency and another, it’s just not going to happen.”

As many as four attackers’ remains have not been publicly or fully identified, including two with questionable Syrian passports. Given French government pleas for help identifying assailants, it appears they were not in France’s extensive DNA database. The total number of attackers has not been spelled out, and French authorities have not said how many people directly involved could still be at large. These gaps point to a security service, one of Europe’s most sophisticated, that was caught off guard—and many blame cross-border failures.

The head of Frontex, Europe’s border control agency, conceded that lack of European cooperation is a grave issue, saying the agency conducts no security checks on its own because European governments don’t trust each other enough to pool databases.

“We are paying today for this lack of trust, which has lasted a decade, of these same governments and European deputies in the European agencies,” Fabrice Leggeri, the Frontex chief, told Le Parisien newspaper. He said Frontex sent a private letter to European governments noting that security at the outer edges of Europe was overwhelmed.

Under Iraqi town, IS militants built large network of tunnels

IRBIL, Iraq (AP)—Under the Iraqi town of Sinjar, Islamic State group militants built a network of tunnels, complete with sleeping quarters, wired with electricity and fortified with sandbags. There, they had boxes of U.S.-made ammunition, medicines and copies of the Quran stashed on shelves.

The Associated Press obtained extensive video footage of the tunnels, which were uncovered by Kurdish forces that took the city in northwestern Iraq earlier this month after more than a year of IS rule.

“We found between 30 and 40 tunnels inside Sinjar,” said Shamo Eado, a commander from Sinjar from the Iraqi Kurdish fighters known as peshmerga. “It was like a network inside the city.”

“Daesh dug these trenches in order to hide from airstrikes and have free movement underground as well as to store weapons and explosives,” Eado said using an Arabic acronym for the Islamic State group. “This was their military arsenal.”

The video, shot by a freelancer touring the town with Kurdish fighters, showed two tunnels running several hundred meters (yards), each starting and ending from houses, through holes knocked in walls or floors.

The narrow tunnels, carved in the rock apparently with jackhammers or other handheld equipment, are just tall enough for a man to stand in. Rows of sandbags line sections of the walls, electrical wires power fans and lights and metal braces reinforce the ceilings. One section of the tunnel resembled a bunker. Dusty copies of the Quran sit above piles of blankets and pillows. Prescription drugs—painkillers and antibiotics—lie scattered along the floor.

In another section of the tunnel, the footage shows stocks of ammunition, including American-made cartridges and bomb-making tools.

IS has been digging tunnels for protection and movement throughout the territory it controls in Iraq and Syria, even before the U.S.-led coalition launched its campaign of airstrikes against the group more than a year ago. “This has been part of ISIS’ strategy from the very beginning,” said Lina Khatib a senior research associate at the Arab Reform initiative, a Paris-based think-tank. “ISIS has been well prepared for this kind of intervention.”

The Islamic State group took control of Sinjar in August 2014, killing and capturing thousands of the town’s mostly Yazidi residents. Yazidis, a religious minority in Iraq with roots that date back to ancient Mesopotamia, are considered heretics by the hard-line Islamic State group. Hundreds of women are thought to still be in IS captivity, those who have escaped say many Yazidi women are forced to convert to Islam and marry IS fighters.

Tunisia declares state of emergency after bus blast kills 12

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP)—Tunisia’s president declared a 30-day state of emergency across the country and imposed an overnight curfew for the capital Tuesday after an explosion struck a bus carrying members of the presidential guard, killing at least 12 people and wounding 20 others.

The government described it as a terrorist attack. The blast on a tree-lined avenue in the heart of Tunis is a new blow to a country that is seen as a model for the region but has struggled against Islamic extremist violence. Radical gunmen staged two attacks earlier this year that killed 60 people, devastated the tourism industry and rattled this young democracy.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the attack against the presidential guard, an elite security force that protects only the president.

President Beji Caid Essebsi, who wasn’t in the bus at the time, declared the state of emergency and curfew on the Tunis region. He convened an emergency meeting of his security council for Wednesday morning.

Speaking on national television, he said Tunisia is at “war against terrorism” and urged international cooperation against extremists who have killed hundreds around Europe and the Mideast in recent weeks, from Paris to Beirut to a Russian plane shot down over Egypt.

“I want to reassure the Tunisian people that we will vanquish terrorism,” he said.

Police fanned out throughout central Tunis after Tuesday’s explosion, and ambulances rushed to the scene, evacuating wounded and dead. Top government ministers visited the scene of the attack after it was cordoned off by police.

Interior Ministry spokesman Walid Louguini told The Associated Press that at least 12 were killed and 20 wounded in the attack.

Witness Bassem Trifi, a human rights lawyer, said the explosion hit the driver’s side of the bus, describing a “catastrophic” scene.

“I saw at least five corpses on the ground,” he told the AP. “This was not an ordinary explosion.”

The attack came days after authorities visibly increased the security level in the capital and deployed security forces in unusually high numbers.

Earlier this month, Tunisian authorities announced the dismantling of a cell that it said had planned attacks at police stations and hotels in the seaside city of Sousse, about 150 kilometers (95 miles) southeast of Tunis. Sousse was one of the targets of attacks earlier this year.

Obama honoring Streisand, Spielberg, Yogi Berra and more

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Barack Obama recognized 17 Americans with the nation's highest civilian award on Tuesday, including the first African-American woman elected to Congress, one of the greatest catchers in baseball history and a "Funny Girl."

"Today we celebrate some extraordinary people: innovators, artists and leaders who contribute to America's strength as a nation," Obama said.

Obama presented the Presidential Medal of Freedom to filmmaker Steven Spielberg, musicians Gloria and Emilio Estefan, singer James Taylor, composer Stephen Sondheim, violinist Itzhak Perlman and actress Barbra Streisand, who won an Academy award for her performance in the classic film, "Funny Girl."

The sports honorees were Baseball Hall of Famers Willie Mays and Yogi Berra. Berra, who died in September, was a famed Yankees' catcher, an 18-time All-Star and 10-time World Series champion. The president noted that Berra also served in World War II. Mays was among the first African-American players in Major League Baseball.

"It's because of giants like Willie that someone like me could even think about running for president," Obama said.

The politicians bestowed the honor are Democrats: Sen. Barbara Mikulski of Maryland, who has championed equal pay and women's health during her 44 years of public service; former Rep. Lee Hamilton from Indiana, a longtime advocate of American national security and international relations; and the late Rep. Shirley Chisholm from New York. Chisholm was the first African-American woman elected to Congress and a founding member of what would become the Congressional Black Caucus.

Of Hamilton, Obama said he helped guide the nation through the Cold War and had a consistent commitment to bipartisanship.

Obama spoke about each recipient; among the other honorees were:

■ Bonnie Carroll, a veterans advocate, who founded the Tragedy Assistance Program for Survivors (TAPS) to support families and loved ones of military heroes killed during their service.

■ Katherine G. Johnson, a NASA mathematician, whose calculations influenced every major space program, including the flight of the first American into space.

■ William Ruckelshaus, a former chief of the Environmental Protection Agency, who shaped the guiding principles of the agency, including a nationwide ban on the pesticide DDT and an agreement with the automobile industry to require catalytic converters to reduce automobile pollution.

Posthumous recipients include Indian tribal advocate Billy Frank Jr., who led "fish-ins" similar to sit-ins during the tribal "fish wars" of the 1960s and 1970s, and civil rights leader Minoru Yasui, who challenged the constitutionality of a military curfew order during World War II on the grounds of racial discrimination and spent months in solitary confinement during the legal battle.

Cable TV hunting show host pleads guilty in poaching case

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP)—The host of a cable TV hunting show has pleaded guilty as part of an investigation into poaching on a remote national preserve in Alaska.

The terms of a plea deal signed by Clark W. Dixon on Monday call for an 18-month prison sentence, a $75,000 fine and forfeiture of trophies and weapons that the U.S. attorney's office says were used in the illegal taking of game.

The charges involve activities between 2008 and 2013 at Noatak National Preserve in north-west Alaska. After the charges were announced in September, the Sportsman Channel said it had suspended Dixon's show, "The Syndicate."

Sentencing was set for February. Dixon is from Mississippi.

The U.S. Attorney's office said in a release that four others charged in the case, including Dixon's father, have pleaded guilty and been sentenced. Dixon is the only one among those facing a prison sentence.

Dixon was accused of participating in the illegal take of a brown bear and with conducting an illegal hunting operation.

"We've reached an agreement where my client has accepted responsibility and is agreeing to move on," Dixon's attorney, Brent Cole, said Tuesday.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven Skrocki said by email that the investigation "uncovered an extensive and illegal outfitting enterprise which was operating undetected for years in the furthest reaches of Alaska."

Skrocki said many of the hunts were selectively edited to appear legal for Dixon's TV show.

'Carol,' 'Beasts of No Nation' lead Independent Spirit nods

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The 1950s-set romance "Carol" starring Cate Blanchett and Rooney Mara collected the most nominations Tuesday for the 31st Film Independent Spirit Awards.

The Todd Haynes-directed film picked up six nods in categories including best feature, director and lead actress for both Mara and Blanchett.

"Beasts of No Nation," a fictional drama about a child soldier, received five nominations including best feature, best cinematography and best director for Cary Joji Fukunaga.

Idris Elba also picked up a supporting acting nomination for the film—the first original feature from Netflix.

Oscar hopefuls are sprinkled throughout each category of the awards recognizing achievements in independent film

Films receiving four nominations each, including beat feature, were "Anomalisa," a dark, animated love story; "Spotlight," about The Boston Globe's Pulitzer Prize-winning investigation into the abuses of the Catholic Church; and "Tangerine," about sex workers in Los Angeles on Christmas Eve.

"Spotlight" was also selected for the Robert Altman Award for its excellent ensemble cast.

Sean Baker's "Tangerine" scored acting nominations for its transgender stars Kitana Kiki Rodriguez (lead) and Mya Taylor (supporting).

Jennifer Jason Leigh was recognized in the supporting female category for her vocal performance in "Anomalisa."

While diversity in choices prevailed in most categories, the nominees for best director were all males—Fukunaga, Haynes, Baker ("Tangerine"), Duke

Johnson and Charlie Kaufman ("Anomalisa"), Tom McCarthy ("Spotlight") and David Robert Mitchell ("It Follows").

Two women—Marielle Heller ("The Diary of a Teenage Girl") and Chloé Zhao ("Songs My Brothers Taught Me")—were, however, both recognized for their direction in the best first feature category.

Heller also received a best first screenplay nomination for the coming-of-age story and actress Bel Powley was recognized for her leading performance.

In the past, the Spirit Awards have tended to include some eventual Oscar nominees and winners. Last year, Indie Spirit winners mimicked the Oscar winners in categories such as best feature ("Birdman"), actress (Julianne Moore for "Still Alice"), and supporting actor (J.K. Simmons for "Whiplash").

Rosie O'Donnell relishes a new criminal role on Fox's 'Empire'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Rosie O'Donnell was delighted when "Empire" creator Lee Daniels invited her to guest star on the Fox drama, then got a case of nerves.

"I'd watched the performances, and I'm stunned every week because I can't believe the level of acting and the amount of (dialogue) and stories" in each episode, O'Donnell said.

Worried about "not being on my game," she worked with an acting coach before taping.

"I prepared for this like I've never prepared for anything in my career, because I didn't want to disappoint and I understood the pace at which they work," she said.

In the episode airing 9 p.m. EST Wednesday, O'Donnell plays Pepper O'Leary, a tough criminal who shared a cell for years with Cookie Lyon, played by series star Taraji P. Henson.

Cookie seeks out Pepper to help her find missing family members, including Cookie's son Hakeem (Bryshere Y. Gray). Pepper is living in Philadelphia and back in the "criminal business," O'Donnell said.

She knows "the lowdown about what's going on in Philly" and is in a position to help Cookie, the actress-comedian said. Playing her first baddie was "liberating," and she was honored that Daniels envisioned her in the role and trusted her to handle it, she said.

Daniels' call came a couple years after O'Donnell bumped into him at a New York theater and complimented him on the 2009 Oscar-winning film "Precious," which Daniels directed.

Mom and sister join forces to dictate wedding party

DEAR ABBY: My mother and older sister are trying to spoil my happiness about my upcoming wedding. I have known my ex-stepmother, "Gina," for 20 years and have been best friends with her for the last 15. We remained close even after she divorced my biological father, who is not in the picture.

I had an appointment to go dress shopping and invited my friends, my mom and Gina (who lives out of state). When I told Mom that Gina was coming, her response was she would come "some other time." Abby, Mom has been remarried for more than 30 years and has spent time with Gina prior to this. It's not like they are enemies.

My older sister doesn't get along with Gina. She told me if Gina is part of the bridal party, she won't come to my wedding. I'm having a bachelorette party in the state where Gina lives. The invitations won't be sent for another few months. When my older sister found out, she accused me of not telling her. I explained that I'm not planning the party, my friend will be sending out the invitations and I wasn't keeping anything from her. She hung up on me!

These two ladies are spoiling what should be a happy time for me. Have I done something that, from an outside perspective, you consider wrong?

DESPERATELY SEEKING ADVICE

DEAR DESPERATELY SEEKING: Your mother's refusal to participate in the selection of your wedding gown was an example of passive aggression. Your mother and sister aren't trying to spoil your happiness about your wedding. They are trying to manipulate and blackmail you into excluding your former stepmother. From this outsider's perspective, you have done nothing wrong—but they have.

DEAR ABBY: I recently started volunteering at a wonderful organization and was asked to assist the board with a special project. At the initial meeting with two of the board members, everything was going well until the first board member excused himself and the other one immediately began to badmouth the person who had left the room.

I'm new to volunteering here. Neither board member knows me at all. It made me very uncomfortable and I didn't know how to respond. These two individuals have known each other for many years.

I don't want to get involved in this petty business, but I'll have to work closely with both of them in the coming months. Most of my interactions will be with the person who was spoken about poorly. At least three board members have recently quit because of this person. How should I proceed?

Johnny Manziel benched by Browns for off-field behavior

BEREA, Ohio (AP)—Dropped from starter to third-stringer—without playing a game.

Johnny Manziel partied his way out of the lineup during Cleveland's bye week.

Browns coach Mike Pettine benched the polarizing quarterback on Tuesday for his off-field behavior, a move that could signal Manziel's days with the team are numbered.

Pettine said Josh McCown will start Monday night's game against Baltimore in place of Manziel, who was recently handed the starting job but couldn't keep it while the team had a week off.

Manziel's benching comes in the wake of a video surfacing of him holding a bottle of champagne and rapping profane lyrics last weekend in an Austin, Texas, nightclub.

He had promised not to bring any embarrassment to the team during its week off, and did just that and Pettine, who has been supportive of Manziel in the past, has had enough.

"Everyone in this organization wants what is best for Johnny just like we do for every player in our locker room. I'm especially disappointed in his actions and behavior because he has been working very hard," Pettine said. "The improvements from last year to this year have been tremendous, but he still has to consistently demonstrate that he has gained a good understanding of what it takes to be successful at the quarterback position on this level," he said. "It goes well beyond the field."

Manziel will not only move back behind McCown, but he'll also be below Austin Davis on the depth chart.

Pettine met with Manziel following practice Tuesday and informed him of his choice to bench him for the foreseeable future. Pettine, whose job could lated its personal conduct policy during the incident.

Still, it was another red flag for Manziel, who has made some positive steps, but just not enough of them.

"He's done everything that's asked as far as meetings and studying and trying to improve as a quarterback," McCown said. "We've seen that. There are obviously things away from the facility that maybe people aren't pleased with and maybe need to get cleaned up."

"It's a work in progress. But I feel like I always see and believe the good in people. There's some youth involved in some of the decision making that might not be the best, but I certainly don't count him out by any stretch."

be in jeopardy if the Browns (2-8) don't demonstrate some progress the rest of this season, said owner Jimmy Haslam and general manager Ray Farmer support his decision.

The 22-year-old Manziel has developed on the field during his second NFL season.

However, despite saying he had learned from his past mistakes, Manziel, who spent 70 days during the offseason in a rehab facility specializing in alcohol and drug treatment, has not shown the maturity the Browns are looking for from their quarterback.

Before Tuesday's practice, Pettine expressed both disappointment and frustration with Manziel, who passed for a career-high 372 yards in a recent loss to Pittsburgh. As he got ready to turn his players loose last week, Pettine spoke to Manziel about being responsible and was given assurances by the 2012 Heisman Trophy winner that he would behave.

Manziel didn't make his plans known, but pledged that he would not become a distraction.

"I don't think they're going to have to worry about me this week," he told reporters.

But it was hardly shocking when the video and photos appeared of Manziel, who entered the league with a reputation for enjoying his free time.

This time, though, the Browns weren't so willing to excuse Manziel's conduct.

Pettine said much of his displeasure in Manziel stemmed in him not seeming to understand that his behavior was a reflection on the team.

"You have a vision of what you want the team to look like, how you want them to handle themselves when they're out of the building," he said. "It's not just pure football here, it's truly player development on and off the field."

"We always say to whom much is given, much is expected, and that's true for all of our players," he said.

McCown has finally recovered from a serious rib injury, which had initially vaulted Manziel into the starting lineup.

"My hope for him is, whatever those choices that he's making, that they're healthy choices and they're good for him as a person," McCown said. "When you're in that room with somebody and spend as much time as we do together, there's a connection there."

Along with his penchant for partying, Manziel was recently investigated by the NFL for a domestic dispute. He was questioned by police in Avon, Ohio, after an in-car argument with his girlfriend.

The league announced on Nov. 17 that it did not find sufficient evidence that Manziel vio-

Keenum not cleared but Rams hopeful about Wednesday

ST. LOUIS (AP)—St. Louis Rams quarterback Case Keenum did not practice Tuesday while going through the NFL's concussion protocol, and coach Jeff Fisher is hopeful he'll be cleared Wednesday.

Fisher said Keenum, injured late in Sunday's loss at Baltimore when the back of his helmet banged into the turf after a hit, was at Rams Park studying film and participating in meetings on Tuesday.

"We're hopeful tomorrow he'll be ready to do some things outside," Fisher said. "So he's feeling pretty well, actually."

The NFL is investigating whether correct concussion protocol was followed when Keenum was injured. Fisher said team doctors and trainers were involved in a conference call Tuesday night to discuss possible tweaks to the system. That call was led by the co-chairman of the NFL Head, Neck and Spine Committee, Dr. Hunt Batjer; Dr. Betsy Nabel, the NFL's chief medical adviser; Dr. Robert Heyer, president of the NFL Physician Society; and Dr. Thom Mayer of the NFL Players Association.

The review also involves the ATC spotter, game officials, NFL medical advisers and the union. Fisher said Monday it was important to "get it straightened out," but backed off Tuesday.

Fisher didn't learn Keenum had sustained a concussion until after his post-game news conference. Fisher is a member of the Competition Committee, but said that was irrelevant in this situation.

evant in this situation.

"There will be a conference call, then they'll adjust the procedures ever so slightly, I guess, on game day," Fisher said earlier Tuesday. Regarding suggestions for improvement, he said "I can't go there because there's too many entities discussing their opinions and exactly what happened."

Fisher believes the independent sideline observer decided not to get involved because Rams trainer Reggie Scott came on the field to examine Keenum with 1:04 remaining and the game tied at 13.

But Fisher inferred Scott had to make a snap judgment when told to return to the sideline, also noting that the play clock had been started. If Scott had questioned Case further on the field, Fisher had been concerned the Rams might have gotten charged with their final timeout.

Nick Foles would regain his starting spot this week at Cincinnati if Keenum can't come back. Foles was benched after several poor outings and Keenum wasn't much of an improvement, going 12 for 26 for just 136 yards and one touchdown.

Rookie Sean Mannion, a third-round pick, is the third-string quarterback.

After the hit by Timmy Jernigan on a busted play, Keenum's hands immediately went toward his head. He initially resisted when offensive lineman Garrett Reynolds tried to lift him to his feet.

Manning's absence extended as he's fitted with walking cast

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP)—Peyton Manning will spend the next week in a walking cast and is expected to miss at least two more games with a torn plantar fascia in his left foot.

Manning missed the Denver Broncos' 17-15 win at Chicago last week when his longtime backup Brock Osweiler won his first NFL start. Manning stayed back in Denver to continue getting treatment.

On Monday, Manning flew to Charlotte, North Carolina, to seek a second opinion from renowned foot and ankle specialist Dr. Robert Anderson, who recommended the five-time MVP spend at least the next week in a walking cast before beginning additional rehab.

"We expect him to be unavailable for at least a couple of games," coach Gary Kubiak told the team's website Tuesday.

That means Manning, who was benched after throwing his fourth interception against Kansas City on Nov. 15, will miss Denver's game against New England on Sunday night as well as the game at San Diego on Dec. 6, at the very least.

Kubiak had already said Osweiler was his starter this week when the Broncos (8-2) host the unbeaten Patriots (10-0). That was both a reflection of Osweiler's performance and Manning's health. Osweiler threw for 250 yards, two TDs and no interceptions at Chicago - Denver's first game without a turnover all season.

Manning will be able to attend meetings and some workouts this week, Kubiak said. He had excused Manning from practices and meetings last week although the quarterback did attend Friday's workout.

The Broncos only have one other quarterback on the roster, rookie Trevor Siemian. With Manning's absence being extended, they're planning to work out former Vikings QB Christian Ponder on Wednesday.

Manning has had a difficult season. After taking a $4 million pay cut over the winter, he and Kubiak spent all offseason and the first two months of the season trying to mesh offensive philosophies, and it usually wasn't very pretty.

He's thrown for just nine touchdowns with an NFL-high 17 interceptions. In his first three years in Denver, he totaled 136 TD throws and just 36 interceptions.

And his career-low 67.6

passer rating is lower than Tim Tebow's 72.9 in 2011 that forced GM John Elway to go after Manning in free agency in 2012.

On Monday, Kubiak blasted as "totally false" a report after the Broncos beat the Bears that Manning plans to play in 2016 even if it's not for the Broncos.

"For there to be any rumors or anything he said that his mind-set is anywhere other than getting healthy and helping this football team, I can tell you is totally false," Kubiak said.

"I visit with this guy on a regular basis and we talk all the time. I can tell you his mind-set is a day at a time trying to get healthy and all those things and help his football (team). That's all he talks to me about. That's all that's important to him right now."

Warriors make NBA history as first team to start season 16-0

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—The defending champion Golden State Warriors set the record for best start in NBA history at 16-0, as Stephen Curry had 24 points and nine assists in a 111-77 rout of the Los Angeles Lakers on Tuesday night.

With their coach sidelined, the Warriors surpassed the 15-0 starts by the Washington Capitols of 1948-49 and 1993-94 Houston Rockets.

Confetti streamed down when the final buzzer sounded and Golden State's players barely celebrated.

Kobe Bryant shot 1 of 14 for just four points, matching the worst-shooting performance of his career in a game where he had at least one basket. The Lakers dropped to 2-12 with the second-worst record in the NBA.

Draymond Green added 18 points, seven rebounds and five assists as the Warriors extended their franchise-record home winning streak to 27 games with coach Steve Kerr watching from behind the scenes while recovering from complications following two back surgeries.

Interim Luke Walton is leading the way, and it might have been a little sweeter to set the record against the Lakers franchise he helped win two titles.

Golden State became the sixth team in NBA history to win 20 consecutive regular-season games, a streak dating to last season. The Suns have the next shot at stopping this incredible start when the Warriors visit Phoenix on Friday night.

Pacers 123, Wizards 106

In Washington, Paul George scored a season-high 40 points and made seven 3-pointers, part of a franchise-record 19 by Indiana in a victory over Washington.

C.J. Miles added 32 points, his most since joining the Pacers before the start of last season, as Indiana won for the ninth time in 11 games.

Miles was 8 of 9 from beyond the arc, and George also missed only once from deep.

The Pacers finished 73.1 percent (19 of 26) from 3-point range, crushing their previous season high of 44.4 percent (12 of 27).

Gary Neal scored 23 points off the bench for the Wizards, whose three-game winning streak was broken.

Grizzlies 110, Mavericks 96

In Memphis, Tennessee, Mike Conley scored 21 points, Jeff Green added 19 and seven Memphis players reached double figures in a victory over Dallas.

Marc Gasol had 15 points and 10 rebounds for Memphis, which won its fifth in the last six games. Matt Barnes and Mario Chalmers added 14 points apiece, and JaMychal Green contributed 13.

Raymond Felton and J.J. Barea each scored 16 points and tried to pull the Mavericks back into the game in the fourth quarter. Dirk Nowitzki finished with 14 points and Zaza Pachulia had 13, both also grabbing 10 rebounds.

Wesley Matthews had 11 points and Deron Williams finished with 10 as Dallas lost its second straight.

Hawks 121, Celtics 97

In Atlanta, Paul Millsap scored 25 points, Jeff Teague added 16 and Atlanta beat Boston.

Atlanta had dropped four of five and was coming off a loss Saturday at Cleveland in which coach Mike Budenholzer was ejected and subsequently fined $25,000 for bumping into referee Ben Taylor.

The Hawks essentially put the game out of reach with an 18-3 run that made it 100-80 with 6:20 remaining on Teague's three-point play.

Avery Bradley had 15 of his 25 points in the first half for Boston, which has dropped three of four. Isaiah Thomas scored 14 points as the Celtics, who began the game ranked ninth in opponent scoring, allowed a season high in points.

Bulls 93, Trail Blazers 88

In Portland, Oregon, Jimmy Butler scored 22 points, Derrick Rose added 17 in his return to the lineup and Chicago held off Portland.

Rose had missed two games with a left ankle injury. His floating jumper stretched Chicago's lead to 78-65 early in the fourth quarter, but Portland rallied within 78-76 on Ed Davis' tip shot.

Damian Lillard missed a 3-pointer to tie it for Portland with 2:25 left, then missed the second of a pair of free throws with 20.7 seconds left that would have also pulled the Blazers into a tie.

Lillard finished with 19 points, 10 rebounds and eight assists, but shot 4 of 22 from the field. CJ McCollum added 18 points.

Clippers 111, Nuggets 94

In Denver, Blake Griffin and DeAndre Jordan each scored 18 points as Los Angeles beat Denver to end a three-game losing streak.

Jordan finished with 11 rebounds and four blocks, while Griffin had 10 rebounds. Chris Paul had 15 points and 10 assists to give the Clippers (7-7) three players with double-doubles.

The Clippers, who hadn't been under .500 this far into a season under coach Doc Rivers, made eight 3-pointers after coming into the game at 31.3 percent.

Danilo Gallinari led Denver with 20 points and had a career-high 18 rebounds.

Iannetta, Mariners agree to $4.25M 1-year deal

SEATTLE (AP)—Chris Iannetta has a new team and a chance to prove last season was a disappointing outlier in his career.

Iannetta agreed to a $4.25 million, one-year contract with the Mariners on Monday with the expectation he will be Seattle's starting catcher heading into 2016. The deal includes $1.75 million in performance bonuses next season and a 2017 club option for $4.25 million that could become guaranteed at $6 million.

"I think it was an opportunity to get back and in a situation to play and prove that this past year was just a down year," Iannetta said on a conference call.

To clear a spot on the 40-man roster, Seattle designated catcher John Hicks for assignment.

Iannetta spent the past four seasons with the Los Angeles Angels but struggled at the plate this year, hitting .188 with 10 homers and 34 RBIs. The batting average was the lowest of his career. A year earlier, Iannetta hit .252 in 108 games.

New Seattle general manager Jerry Dipoto saw Iannetta up close the past few seasons with the Angels and said the addition provides "depth at a critical position."

It also takes some stress off Mike Zunino behind the plate. The No. 3 pick in the 2012 amateur draft was sent to the instructional league late last season in the hope of rebuilding his swing. Zunino batted .174 with 132 strikeouts in 112 games.

"I think Chris has always drawn deep at-bats and gets on base. Even relative to a rough year on batting average, the other numbers all stacked up," Dipoto said. "As a result, I think Chris is a good candidate for a bounceback season offensively."

Seattle will be the third team for Iannetta, who started his career with Colorado.

Dipoto also said the Mariners hope to re-sign free agent right-hander Hisashi Iwakuma, who turned down the club's qualifying offer. Iwakuma was slowed by injuries last season, but made 20 starts and was 9-5 with a 3.54 ERA. He threw the first no-hitter of his career.

Iannetta can earn $150,000 each for 75, 80, 85, 115 and 120 games started next year and $200,000 apiece for 90, 95, 100, 105 and 110.

His 2017 option would become guaranteed at $6 million if he starts 100 games in 2016 and does not end the season on the disabled list with an injury to his right elbow, back or either hip. If Seattle exercises the option at $4.25 million, Iannetta could earn the same performance bonuses in 2017.

Athletics add versatile lefty Rich Hill on $6M deal

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—In a matter of months, Rich Hill's remarkable path to rejoining a rotation took him from Washington's farm system to independent ball on Long Island and then back to Boston to start in September.

Hill moved to the right side of the rubber and adjusted his arm angle along the way—and he just landed himself a nice new contract because of those significant tweaks, which might mean little to someone outside the game.

The left-hander agreed to a $6 million, one-year contract with the Oakland Athletics on Friday, giving the small-budget franchise a versatile, experienced pitcher who can handle a variety of roles.

Yet they're counting on him as a starter. Hill chose the A's because he gets to start again.

"It was really a personal journey for myself getting back to what I always wanted to do, being a starting pitcher," said Hill, who will be reunited with his former Boston pitching coach, Curt Young.

In another move Friday designed to help the pitching staff, Oakland acquired reliever Liam Hendriks from the Toronto Blue Jays for right-hander Jesse Chavez.

Hill took his physical in the Bay Area and the team announced the deal before he was expected to fly back to Boston in the afternoon. Hill became the second free agent to switch teams after infielder Cliff Pennington joined the Los Angeles Angels earlier in the week.

The 35-year-old lefty began the 2015 season with Washington's Triple-A club in Syracuse before going 2-1 with a 1.55 ERA in four starts and 29 innings with the Boston Red Sox as a September call-up. He had 36 strikeouts and five walks.

"Honestly, it started when I was throwing bullpens back home. I could feel the consistency, I could feel the ball coming out of my hand the way I wanted it to," Hill said. "Every outing built off the prior outing. That was really where that came from. It was always there—it was getting the opportunity and running with it. The confidence has always been there, the ability has always been there. For me it was no surprise what happened in September."

General manager David Forst and executive vice president of baseball operations Billy Beane learned the importance of pitching depth in recent seasons with a rash of injuries in both the rotation and bullpen.

"There's probably not a better example than 2015 in our case of needing as many starting pitchers as you can possibly get," Forst said.

Hill has a 26-23 career record and 4.54 ERA in parts of 11 seasons as a starter and reliever for the Chicago Cubs, Baltimore, Boston, Cleveland, the Angels and Yankees.

"You can never have too much pitching," manager Bob Melvin said. "He has had success as a starter and that's how we see him. He was terrific in his late-season starts and it's nice to have another veteran guy."

After going 2-2 with a 2.91 ERA in 25 relief appearances with Syracuse, Hill was released June 24 and then made two starts with the Long Island Ducks of the independent Atlantic League before signing a minor league deal with Boston on Aug. 14.

The A's sure noticed the changes, as did other clubs who expressed interest.

Hill said Oakland gave him "respect" from the start of the process and that meant a lot in his decision.

Maybin heading back to Tigers in deal for 2 left-handers

DETROIT (AP)—Cameron Maybin was once a prospect for the Detroit Tigers, with enough potential that they were able to trade him in the deal that brought Miguel Cabrera to Motown.

Now Maybin is coming back to Detroit.

The Tigers acquired the outfielder from the Atlanta Braves on Friday for left-handers Ian Krol and Gabe Speier.

"Cameron Maybin is a good outfielder with plenty of experience in center field," Detroit general manager Al Avila said. "He is coming off of a solid offensive season in 2015 and brings speed and athleticism to our club."

The Tigers took Maybin with the 10th overall pick in the 2005 draft, one spot ahead of Andrew McCutchen. Maybin made his major league debut for Detroit in 2007 before being traded to the Marlins.

He never became a star, but he's still only 28. Maybin hit .267 with 10 homers, 59 RBIs and 23 steals for the Braves this year. Avila says manager Brad Ausmus will determine Maybin's role during spring training.

Anthony Gose was Detroit's primary starter in center field last season, but the team could use some help in left after trading Yoenis Cespedes at the end of July.

Krol made 33 relief appearances for the Tigers in 2015, going 2-3 with a 5.79 ERA. Speier pitched in 33 games this year for Class A West Michigan, going 4-2 with a 2.86 ERA.

Ferrera grabbed the driver's seat going into the fourth quarter behind the 7 points of Joshua Leyco in the third. Four other Ferrara players also lit up the board in the third period to overhaul a 23-27 halftime deficit.

However, Ferrara failed to hang on to the lead in the final frame with Leyco held scoreless in the fourth and Chico Bondoc fouling out late in the game after scoring 9 points. Jun Javier also struggled for Ferrara in the fourth, as he was limited to two field goals, while Jun Castro was the biggest missing link on the team's offense, tallying only 3 points—all of them came from the foul line. Before his lackluster semis game against Judith's, Castro sizzled for 22 points in their 67-59 playoff win against the Sonics.

The cat-quick Ferrara guard was held to 1 point in the first quarter of their Final Four outing against Judith's, which took a 12-9 advantage after its foe made only four field goals in the opening frame. Judith's upped the lead to 4 at the break behind the 8 first-half points of benchwarmer Ronnie Sto. Domingo and 7 markers of starter Mike Arciaga. However, Judith's lost the upper hand in the third with only Arciaga hitting the board in that period.

Arciaga added another field goal to start the fourth frame for Judith's before Flores took over to reclaim the lead and eliminate Ferrara.

Tsunami Swimming Center Saipan members are up for the various competitions scheduled in the 2015-2016 season despite starting their training sessions late due to Typhoon Soudelor.

The club's swimmers just resumed their practice at the Kan Pacific Swimming Pool last week since the facility was closed last Aug. 2 after sustaining significant damage from the typhoon. With the 50-meter pool unavailable, Tsunami Saipan members had to look for alternative options and were fortunate to get permission to use the facility of Laolao Bay Golf & Resort.

"Laolao kindly provided us their pool for our practice sessions. We practiced there four to five times a week so we are ready for competitions this season," Tsunami Saipan head coach Hiro Kimura said.

"We really appreciate Laolao general manager Kim Chang Ho for giving us the wonderful environment for our swimming practice," Kimura added.

The Tsunami Saipan coach also said they will have their last training session at the Laolao facility this Saturday, while regular practices will continue at the Marpi pool as they prepare for on and off-island competitions.

The club will participate in two Northern Mariana Islands Swimming Federation-sanctioned events in January and May and a several other local competitions, while it will also send representatives to tournaments in Japan and Guam next year.

"We already decided to participate in Tokyo Junior Sprint and Guam Championships. Also, I'm planning to have a swim training camp in Japan next summer," Kimura said.

The Guam competitions are scheduled for April and May, while the Tokyo Junior Sprint is usually held in the first quarter of the year. Early this year, Tsunami Saipan sent returnees Kaito and Ryuto Yanai and Miku Tammy, Sophia Gauran, Juhn Tenorio, Nanaka Watanabe, Anthony Camacho-Deleon Guerrero, Hans Xu, and Ashley Dangol to the Tokyo Sprint. Kensuki Kimura, Kai Staal, and Angel De Jesus also represented the club in the past editions of the annual event.

Jonny Sablan survived a bogey-filled day to clinch the Marianas Golfers Association's November Ace of the Month held last Nov. 7 at the Laolao Bay Golf & Resort's east course.

Sablan fired rounds of 46 and 44 for a gross score of 90 and with a 15 handicap handed him with a 3-over 75. He ended up tied with Joey Dela Cruz, who also had a 75 after the seven-handicapper's 82 gross.

Dela Cruz started at the back nine where he ended up with a 1-over 37 but had a horrible round at the front with a 9-over 45 that had Sablan forcing the tie.

The MGA vice president lost to Sablan after the one-hole playoff at No. 9.

Sablan bogeyed holes No. 2, 8, and 15, double bogeyed in No. 4, 6, 9, 10, 11, and 18, had a triple bogey in No. 16, and quadruple-bogeyed the par-4 No. 5 that stained his birdies at 14 and 17. He also eagled the par-5 No. 3 and shot even pars in No. 1, 7, 12, and 13.

Ned Norita, the October Ace monthly winner, came in third with a 76 behind a gross score of 84 (40-44) and an eight handicap.

J.J. Atalig (president), Geri Dela Cruz (secretary), James Benavente (treasurer), Chandler DeLoatch (tournament director), Bill Camacho, Aaron Benavente, Tony Guerrero, Jenny Hegland, Carl Hocog, Greg Sablan Jr., Jack Salas, Jesse Seman, Dung Tenorio, and Calvin Yamagishi were the other MGA officers and members that played.

Nate Camacho, Kang Seung Woo, and Tony Satur were the guest players.

Atalig led the closest to the pin winners in No. 3, while James Benavente, Greg Sablan Jr., and Tenorio duplicated the feat in No. 7, 13, and 17.

Jonny Sablan now joins other Ace of the Month winners Harry Nakamura (January), Yamagishi (February), Seman (March), Erlinda Naputi (April), Hegland (May), DeLoatch (June), Jay Muna (July), Geri Dela Cruz (August), Louie Tilipao (September), and Norita (October).

The hunt for the final spot on the Ace of the Month, December, will continue on Dec. 5, Saturday, also at the Greg Norman-designed Laolao east course. Showtime is at 8am while tee off starts at 9am.

Dec. 5 will also be the first day of MGA's Ace of Aces Championship where Atalig is reminding all monthly winners to come on time for the proper pairing.

"If they should be late there is a possibility that they'll be disqualified from the Ace of Aces championship," said Atalig in an email.

If the two Jonny's teams won't make their move, any of the three squads supported by Jokers Bar & Grill may end up as the champion of the Saipan Billiards Association Budweiser Open 8-Ball Tuesday League.

The Jokers Destroyers are currently on top of the heap after games last Tuesday night with a 32-20 won-loss record followed closely by the IT&E Voyagers' 31-21 slate. Two games behind at third are the Docomo Hustlers (29-23).

The StraighBlackBall, the fourth Jokers team, are tied with the Jonny's Crazy 8 with 22-30 cards, while the Jonny's Titans complete the six-team field at 20-32.

The Crazy 8 and the Titans still have 16 weeks left to make their move if they hope to dislodge the leaders on top.

The Destroyers last Tuesday made short work of the Titans behind the brilliant games of Rico Montano and Cesar Sangalang, who combined for eight of their team's nine wins.

Their team up also resulted into two wins in the Partner's 8-ball event with Montano going 2-1 in the singles while Sangalang went 2-0.

Nolan Cultura, the team captain, and Jeff Garcia were the other members of the Destroyers.

The Titans are composed of Patrick Cepeda, Ray Matsunaga, John Reyes, Randy Sablan, and Jack Thornsaket.

The Voyagers also scored a 9-4 win over the Crazy 8 while the Hustlers trounced the StraighBlackBall, 8-5.

Action in the Tuesday League continues on Dec. 1 with the top-ranked Destroyers taking on the Voyagers, the current second placer. The Hustlers will be hosting the Titans, while the StraighBlackBall will visit the Crazy 8 in the other scheduled matches.

There will be no Thursday League games today, Thanksgiving Day. Matches will resume on Dec. 3 with the anticipated match up between co-leaders National and Homeboyz.

The Rack 'N' Roll will also host the WildBoyz, while Team SCS will go up against the Wild Wild West in the other schedule games.

The Tuesday League will run for four months with the final week to be held on March 15, while the Thursday League will end on April 7, 2016.
